

BROOKLYN'S BIG JUBILEE.

MOURNING FOR A LIVING BRIDE

The Romantic Story of a Young Jewess and her Human Catholic Lover.

ELMIRA, May 22.—The front door of the house of a wealthy Hebrew family in this city is draped with black and covered with a death notice was sent on Sunday to the daily paper, but was not published, announcing the departure from this world of a young and lovely girl, although she was to whom it referred a bride on her way with her husband to forever. She is one of the younger daughters of Fabian Schwartz, a large dealer in wool, and a man of much wealth. One of her brothers is the Hon. Jacob Schwartz, a young man conspicuous in social, political, and professional circles, who has rapidly risen to prominence, and is not unknown to the bar in New York city. The young woman's name is Celia. She has all the personal attractiveness that belongs to her race, is highly educated, and is above the average. Intellectually, The bridegroom is Mort B. Sullivan, a member of a Roman Catholic family in this city. The two young people were in the same class in the Free Academy here, and an attachment was formed there that is from every city in the Union, and still is hardened with fresh requests. The preparations for the day are observable over hand in Brooklyn, and if the city is not in the gayest attire possible it will not be the fault of decorators. The public buildings, the clubs, the theatres, the slippings, the rows upon rows of private houses, will display bunting and flags by day, and lanterns and transparencies by night.

The most of the Brooklyn stores will close at noon and many will be closed all day.

Mayor Low received a despatch yesterday from Gov. Cleveland, saying that he has made arrangements as would enable him to attend the celebration of the bridge opening and the city's reception. Mayor Low and the Common Council Committee yesterday issued a circular respecting the Comptroller and Auditor, the Board of Aldermen, the Brooklyn members of the Bridge Trustee, the heads of their departments, their deputies, the Board of Education, the Board of Assessors, the Board of Elections, the Judiciary, the county officials, the Board of Supervisors, the members of the Legislature, ex-Mayors, ex-Comptrollers, and ex-Auditors of the City, the members of the Brooklyn Common Council, the members of the Mayor's cabinet, and staff. Commodore Parker and other officers of the army and navy, Brigadier-General of the Second Division, and the members of the State Board of Comptroller at noon on Thursday to the bridge under escort. The Twenty-third Legion will escort these officials and the Amusement.

CLOSE OF THE FRENCH OPERA SEASON.

Mme. Hess brought her engagement in this country and the French opera season to an end last evening at Daly's. She appeared on the stage of "The Mascotte," in an act from "Le Coq du Corseville," and in a bacchanal vademon, entitled "Pomme d'Api," written for her by Offenbach, and admirably suited to her peculiar talents.

The little actress appeared at her best.

Her farewell was a rousing one, a large audience, and the entire management, the parents of some one, friends, manager or admirers—in the matter of flowers.

Pomme d'Api is about as little force as human nature can exert. But she carried it off in her usual graceful and kittenish style, which makes everything seem rather less serious than it is. She has never sought to exaggerate or emphasize the equivocal humor of the opera in which she has appeared, and that characteristic of restraint and taste very much to the artistic excellence of her work.

BASE BALL Yesterday.

Winning a third victory over the Baltimore team at the Polo grounds yesterday, the Metropolitan now stand with a championship record of eight victories and seven defeats. Yesterday's game was won by supr erior pitching and batting.

PALMERS.

First base by error—Baltimore 6; Metropolitan 1.

Earned Run—Baltimore 6; Metropolitan 2.

On the Underhand—Style & Cash's numbers defeated a nine from John Scott's print.

On the St. George cricket grounds the Hill nine of the Academy defeated the Hill nine of the New York Academy.

These will be a picture in gas jets of the bridge to be opened at the Academy, and are to be shown in the dates of the year 1878, the day when above.

Mayor Low said yesterday that when the galleries were filled the doors would be closed and those who entered would be admitted to the meeting of the citizens in the reception itself.

The reception will last only an hour, and in those to whom a ticket may be given a chance to speak.
